

A PRACTICAL SELF-CHECK FOR RESTORATION COMPANIES

AI Visibility Checklist

Make your business easier to find, understand, and choose.

Use these 10 checks to find gaps, give your agency clear tasks, and choose your next three actions. Start with one important service and the area you actually serve.

01 Confirm the facts

Business details and real proof

02 Check access

Pages search systems can read

03 Track outcomes

Visibility, inquiries, and jobs

Mark one status per check. "Done" means you have verified it. "Ask my agency" means evidence is still needed. No status guarantees rankings or AI recommendations.

01 OWNER Keep your business details consistent

Why it matters. Conflicting details can confuse customers and make your business harder to identify.

Check it. Compare your website, Google Business Profile, Bing Places, and key listings. Check your business name, phone, services, hours, and the areas you actually serve. Test the phone link on your mobile site.

Next step. Keep your correct business details in one place. Fix the error most likely to confuse a customer first. If you use call tracking, ask your agency to confirm where each number sends callers.

☐ Done ☐ Needs attention ☐ Ask my agency

02 OWNER + AGENCY Make your Google profile match reality

Why it matters. Complete, accurate information supports local discovery. Google also considers relevance, distance, and prominence; a profile cannot guarantee AI placement.

Check it. Confirm verification, appropriate categories, services, hours, and website link. If customers do not visit your location, follow service-area rules and hide the address. Do not add a virtual office to appear local.

Next step. Correct inaccurate details. Use "24/7" only when it reflects your actual availability.

CONTENT & EXPERIENCE

Answer the questions before the call.

Start with an existing page that gets seen in search, brings in inquiries, or covers an important service. A missing AI mention alone doesn't mean you need another page.

03 OWNER Explain the service and the next step

Why it matters. Clear, specific information helps a property owner decide whether you can help. It also gives search systems useful text to understand.

Check it. Open an important service page on your phone. Can you find the service, real coverage area, availability, process, and contact method? Does it answer questions your team actually receives?

Next step. Add the most important missing answer to that page. Ask your agency for search queries and page performance before proposing a new page.

☐ Done ☐ Needs attention ☐ Ask my agency

EXAMPLE STRUCTURE · ADAPT TO YOUR ACTUAL OPERATION

What happens when I call about water damage?

Explain who answers, what information they ask for, how availability is confirmed, and what the first visit involves. Say what affects timing. Avoid an arrival-time promise your team cannot consistently meet.

04 OWNER Show evidence of work you actually do

Why it matters. Details from real jobs help customers understand your experience and decide whether to trust your team.

Check it. Review your project examples, photos, team information, and credentials. Are they accurate, current, and relevant? Do you have permission to publish them? Can you back up your claims?

Next step. Show a real job on the service page: what happened, what you did, and the result your records support. Use approved photos and a general location; leave out private customer details.

☐ Done ☐ Needs attention ☐ Ask my agency

Useful proof: "A supply-line leak affected two rooms. Our team documented moisture readings and drying progress." Publish details like these only when your job records support them.

REPUTATION & REFERENCES

Help customers check your reputation.

Reviews and local or industry listings give customers another way to check your business. Focus on accurate, useful information in the places they're likely to look.

05 OWNER Make honest reviews a repeatable process

Why it matters. Reviews help customers decide whether to call. Google says more reviews and positive ratings can help local rankings.

Check it. Read recent reviews and check how your team asks for them. Invite genuine feedback without rewards or filtering requests to happy customers only. Review replies should be helpful and protect customer privacy.

Next step. Choose a point in each job when you'll ask for feedback. Put one person in charge of sending review invitations and checking new reviews.

NEUTRAL REVIEW INVITATION

"Thank you for choosing our team. If you would like to share your experience, you can leave an honest review here: [your review link]. We appreciate your feedback."

06 OWNER + AGENCY Check the references that matter locally

Why it matters. A relevant third party can help a customer verify a claim. The effect of any individual directory or reference on AI answers is uncertain.

Check it. Search your business name. Review credible local, trade, and certification listings where you actually belong. Do their business details and links work? Are claimed memberships and credentials current?

Next step. Correct an important local or industry listing, or ask an organization you work with about a business profile. Skip bulk directory packages and don't claim affiliations you don't have.

☐ Done ☐ Needs attention ☐ Ask my agency

What needs updating, and how will you check it?

SEARCH ACCESS · ASK YOUR AGENCY

Can search systems reach the right page?

A crawler is software that retrieves pages. Indexing means a search engine has added a page to its searchable collection. A page can load for you and still have a discovery problem.

07 AGENCY Verify the live page is discoverable

Why it matters. Search eligibility requires crawl access, a working page, and indexable content. A supporting link in Google's AI features must also be indexed and eligible for a search preview. Selection is not guaranteed.

Check it. Ask for Google Search Console and Bing URL Inspection evidence for your homepage and priority service page. Confirm the public page works, important text is readable, and normal internal links lead to it.

Next step. Ask your agency to find the problem before rewriting the page. Request a dated record of the live changes and what Google and Bing reported before and after.

☐ Done ☐ Needs attention ☐ Ask my agency

Ask your agency to show you what they checked

Indexing controls No unintended noindex exclusion; no blocking robots.txt rule. The canonical (preferred URL) points to the intended page.

Discovery & content The sitemap lists intended pages. Important text is available to crawlers. Visible business facts agree with any structured data (machine-readable page labels).

08 AGENCY Separate AI search access from training

Why it matters. OpenAI uses OAI-SearchBot for search discovery and GPTBot for potential model-training use. Their controls are independent; allowing search access does not guarantee inclusion.

Check it. Ask the agency to review robots.txt and hosting or firewall blocks for Googlebot, Bingbot, and the search crawlers you choose to support. Have them use each provider's current documentation and verify legitimate requests.

Next step. Correct unintended blocks on public pages while retaining security controls and your chosen training policy. Recheck the live response after changes.

☐ Done ☐ Needs attention ☐ Ask my agency

Do not buy a shortcut. Google does not require special AI schema or an //ms.txt file for its AI search features. Treat such proposals as experiments, not prerequisites.

MONITORING & INQUIRIES

Track mentions, links, visits, and inquiries.

A mention names your company. A citation links to your website. A referral brings a visit. An inquiry is an actual call or form response. One does not prove the others.

09 OWNER + AGENCY Use AI questions as spot checks

Why it matters. Saved answers can expose wrong facts or missing information. A few prompts do not measure overall visibility or establish a stable ranking.

Check it. Choose a small, repeatable set of service-and-location questions. Record the exact wording, date, assistant/model if shown, search mode, and location context. Save the answer and its source links.

Next step. Record company mentions and website links separately. Repeat the same questions under similar conditions. If an answer gets a fact wrong, check its sources before changing your page.

☐ Done ☐ Needs attention ☐ Ask my agency

SAMPLE PROMPT · REPLACE THE BRACKETS

“Which companies provide water damage restoration in [city, state], and what sources support their service area and availability?”

Answers vary with time, location, personalization, and product settings. Verify claims against the linked sources.

10 OWNER + AGENCY Connect visibility to actual inquiries

Why it matters. Track qualified inquiries and booked jobs alongside visibility. Referral reports can miss visits that began with AI search.

Check it. Review visits from AI tools, calls, forms, and booked jobs for the same period. Bing’s AI Performance report can add citation data, but it does not cover all AI mentions or leads.

Next step. Test call and form tracking with your team. Compare periods of the same length and note storms, seasonal changes, ad spending, and site updates. Ask callers how they found you. Record “unknown” when you can’t tell.

YOUR WORKSHEET

Choose your next three actions.

First, fix errors customers can see and problems that block search access. Then improve an important page where you've found something missing. If you need more information, make gathering it your next action.

Business: _____ Review date: _____

1 What needs attention + how you know _____
Next action _____
Owner _____ Due date _____
How we will verify it _____

2 What needs attention + how you know _____
Next action _____
Owner _____ Due date _____
How we will verify it _____

3 What needs attention + how you know _____
Next action _____
Owner _____ Due date _____
How we will verify it _____

At the next review: Check the live page and compare periods of the same length. Mark anything you haven't verified "not checked." Check separately for changes in visibility and inquiries.
